As I've been programming for almost 4 years now one thing keeps getting clearer by the day - the software industry is something amazing but in order to stay in it you need to keep learning. The process of creating software is constantly evolving and you need to evolve with it. Luckily, I've always been a person who loves studying and who strives to do better. That's why I'm so excited to be a part of this contest. I know that by the end of it I will be better at working in a team, communicating with colleagues and managing projects.

These skills are important to me because since I was a kid I've always been dreaming of becoming an entrepreneur and starting my own company. The reason behind this is my desire to make people's lives easier. Why? When you make someone's life easier, you save them a bit of time. Time is the most valuable resource in the world and the reason is its limited supply. This way I would provide people with more time to spend on the things that matter to them the most.

I'm sure that It's not gonna be easy and that in order to succeed you need to know how the industry works. You need to know how to write good code, how to manage it and how to make it secure. Before I go on the journey of founding my own company I would like to experience these processes at first hand. That's why I wish to become a software developer who knows how to create good software from the ground up and further down the road - a project manager who knows how to lead and manage his team.
